

Polish and English Communication

My name is Marta Stelmaszak. I use my language skills in Polish and English combined with a thorough understanding of economics and business to help SMEs make as big an international impact as possible.

It started a few years ago when I met my first client at a trade fair in London. They were promoting their online system to other businesses there, and we had a long, genuine conversation about how they were going to transform some of the most time-consuming aspects of running a small to medium-sized business. I felt really inspired by their passion and I wanted to use my language skills to help.

My clients already had their website and product translated into major languages, such as German, French and Spanish. They were considering other European languages, including Polish. They thought that I was the best person to work on it because I knew their business and had spent plenty of time talking with them about their product. We started by translating the system, then the website, marketing materials, brochures, etc. They started their expansion to Poland and I was there with my professional advice all the way: seeing their product enter the market, attract interest and boost sales.

This is why I translate. I want to use my unique combination of business, marketing and language skills to help businesses like yours to expand to Poland. I work only in the areas in which I have specialist knowledge, and I spend plenty of time researching products, services, competitors and markets. I put enormous emphasis on confidentiality and data security to ensure that your business strategies remain top secret. Your ultimate business goals are my priority, so you're never buying just a translation; you are always buying access to a new market.

To assist you in achieving these goals, I offer a range of translation, interpreting and transcreation services. You can read more about them in this brochure. You will find out what can I do for you and how we can work together.
